how we WORK

NARRATIVE

Public Art at MAA Abilene

MAA Abilene, located right across the street from the Florida light rail station, will bring a variety of public art moments that will be distinctly visible to both pedestrian and commuter traffic. Three public art locations – a hand painted mural on the east-facing retaining wall along Abilene, and outdoor sculptures on both the southwest corner of the building and to the west of the site, near the entry plaza space – will all be oriented towards the west in order to maximize public accessibility. Though each artwork will have its own individual story to tell, all public works on the property will have a common thread of a unified public art program. Additionally, all artworks will follow the art goals and selection criteria of the MAA Abilene art plan, which can be seen on the following pages (p. 6 and 7).

ART GOALS

SELECTION CRITERIA

Growth, change, and diversity make up the city of Aurora's story. The artwork at MAA Abilene will embrace and celebrate these defining characteristics by showcasing works that push artistic boundaries, spark conversation, and move us into the future. From outdoor sculptural installations and murals, the diversity of art moments will feel discoverable and accessible to all, and will make a meaningful contribution to the city's arts and culture ecosystem.

We will be searching for works from local and national artists that are able to build off of and celebrate the energy surrounding this new development through designs that are large-scale, saturated in color, and showcase the diversity of the city. The art program at MAA Abilene will not only create a unique identity for the project itself, but also for the adjacent Florida light rail station. Acting as an iconic wayfinding beacon, the collection will provoke intrigue, and inspire people to explore the area.
